d. Statement of Objectives and/or Accomplishments, actual and proposed indicating need for and value of the service or product, etc. The necessity of the work should be demonstrated. Work measurement and unit cost data should be used wherever possible to relate work load to personnel. Where monthly reports of activity have been maintained, such reports provide a factual basis.

e. Organization Chart and Functional Chart clearly delineating lines of authority and distribution of activities within the component parts of the Office or Staff Section, supported by individual statements describing the activities of each such component.

f. Chart showing the flow of work through the various components of the Office or Staff Section. Work flow charts should clearly denote the flow of projects into and through the various components of each Office or Staff Section and the production or service contributed in the flow by each component. It is unnecessary to go into great detail with regard to the flow of papers and documents through the Office or Staff Section where such data would not contribute to an analysis of its main production goal or objective.
